Distance Learning 245-8212

Distance learning courses can increase student flexibility regarding the time, place, and pace of study. Cable TV courses provide instruction to students via commercial and public access television. Students receive their course content through television and interact with faculty through phone and email. Online courses generally provide the most flexibility for students in terms of time and place of study. Students enrolled in online classes access course content and complete assignments remotely via the internet. Some online courses require synchronous meetings. Interactive Television (ITV) classes and videoconferencing provide two-way video and audio instruction between students and faculty at various sites around the state. Students need to go to the ITV or videoconferencing site on campus. On-site outreach courses involve instructors hired by another UH campus to teach classes on Kaua‘i.
